INSOMNIA EDITION

IN EDUCATION: OBSOLETE TEXTBOOKS

Last week the Secretary of Education Arne Duncan declared that the nation should move away from printed textbooks and replace them with digital copies.

I, for one, cannot agree more. eReaders and textbooks go hand in hand.

Electronic textbooks are much more cost effective for both the consumer and the producer. The saves money by not having to use all that paper to print multiple copies. And in later editions, the publisher can just send out update for either free or a small fee. On the consumer side, you end up paying a lot for the eReader, but this initial cost will get balanced out by the cheaper textbooks you can now buy.

Not only that, but the consumer can carry around all their textbooks all the time. That means that if you forget something from a previous class, you have the reference already with you.

Using an eReader also allows you to be more efficient in your use of time. Instead of needing to switch between the book and whatever platform you take notes with, they are now one and the same. And forget using an index to find things anymore; you can just hit search and type in your query.

INSOMNIA BY ANONYMOUS

We are the living dead, who lurk outside of time
As creatures of the night, hidden from the light.
Go and rest your head while we pay for our crimes,

For we shall not be freed as those supine
Sleepers who submit to sleep's inhuman might,
For we are the restless dead, who work outside of time.

Trapped outside of sound, we live resigned
To our confinement, always out of sight.
Go and close your eyes while we pay for our crimes.

Earth does not turn as we sit here confined
To this world of silence, emptiness and spite.
We are the living dead, who wither out of time,

The world in flux, light and dark combined,
Reality crumbling in exhaustion's might
Go and rest your head while we all lose our minds

The day that we enjoyed is now unkind
And darkness hides salvation from our sight.
We are the living dead, who lurk outside of time
Go and rest your head while we pay for our crimes

Oasis Product of the Week

MINUTE MAID

Minute Maid will continue to be on sale through the 17th at its low price of $1.50 (was $1.75).

AROUND PENN: 60 SECOND LECTURES

Every semester, Penn hosts a lecture series where every lecture is just one minute. Each lecture is hosted by a different member of Penn's illustrious faculty each week on a different topic. Past topics have included: "The Knowable Universe," "How to Protect Civil Liberties," and "Are Humans Still Evolving?"

This week's lecture will be "The Youth Vote in this Presidential Election," hosted by David Thornburgh, Exec Director of Fels Institute of Government.

Given that the election will be happening soon (November 6), you should go and learn about why your vote matters.

If you'd like to see past lectures, you can check them out at the link below.
